Contact Details Fraserburgh Fraserburgh is a town on the northern shore of the Firth of Forth in the North East of Scotland. It was incorporated as a burgh in the 12th century when a Dominican friary was established on the site and it's charter was confirmed in 1309 by Edward I. During the 17th and 18th centuries trade flourished due to the demand for corn in the rearing of the Atlantic breeding stock of geese. The town was granted its first charter by Charles I in 1631 and trade flourished until the early 19th century. By the mid 19th century only four traders remained when the North British Railway was opened through the area. The railway and competition from cheaper Scottish long sea shipping routes from Leith saw the decline of the local economy. Fraserburgh railway station, also called "Fraserburgh West", was in the centre of the town, but the station closed in 1956. Fraserburgh regained its charter in 1877 and regained its burgh status in 1974. Other places to visit Standing Stones - a set of stone circles, one is in the North-East corner of the town. It is thought to be the oldest standing stones in the world. The Museum - a local museum, and also a tourist information centre. Torr Brae - a glen in the town. When to go May to September - Good summer weather and many sailing trips. October - Festivals including the 4th of July, art show, bonfire and firework display on 9th July. September - Francis Swanton Morris Festival - Francis Swanton Morris, a writer and artist, was born in the town in 1815, although the exact location of his birthplace is not certain. There is a public house in town named after him. Why go to Fraserburgh? Consider Fraserburgh for your next adventure on sea or on land. The town has a lively town centre and some excellent coastal walks. There are long sandy beaches to the north and south. Situated on the Forth Line Railway between Edinburgh and Glasgow, Fraserburgh is only 60 minutes from both these cities. The town's Tudor buildings still stand and many old buildings can still be seen, some of which are well-preserved examples of Georgian architecture.George Silveira George Silveira is the former CEO of the North American division of Bangkok Bank. Nowhere man The question is: how can one imagine a finite place that is not just a location? What can one say about a place that even has a name? Here, space and time are only apparitions. The mind is always here, outside, as well as being enclosed within the body. How can one think? The body (the organs) never separates the mind from the environment. What is it to think? To imagine? A kind of thinking? Words are not necessary to feel. (Küröm, 52) The butterfly is a microcosm of the universe. Insects in general have such a small spatial extension and such a small temporal period of life. We say they are unaware of what is going on around them. But what does this mean? The point is that the invisible is not like this. The butterfly, the mind, does not have the same boundaries as that which can be perceived by the eye. (Küröm, 52) We who observe ourselves notice how there is such a thing as within and without. In a sense, the body, the organs, the whole human being is like the butterfly. The outer world is outside the body, but also inside the mind. The body is the time and space which organizes the thoughts, but it does not think. The body is a kind of thought. (Küröm, 52) If we want to think about the earth, we have to think of objects, of the earth. We do not need to think about ourselves in this context, but we need to put ourselves in our coordinates. We are not aware of the earth, but we can learn to think of it. We can think of a place that is quite far away. (Csikszereda, 32) I heard a poem once by this friend of mine who had just found a woman with whom he could be happy. Since he was a loser, he had felt completely lost. This woman had offered herself to him, and in one way or another they had been living a sort of illusion that she was his woman. The woman in question was calling him her lover. He had to admit that it was not in vain. But this woman was very much a mystery to him. This friend asked me how I would imagine such a woman. (Küröm, 52) It is the same problem that one has
